COUNTY COURT REPORT

Fairbanks on Trial for the Murder of Mary Grout

It Took Three Days to Get a Jury-the State Began Putting In Its Case Monday-the Main Facts in Brief-Appearance of the Respondent.

Last Thursday morning the case of State vs. William Fairbanks for the mur-der of Mary Grout at Saxtons River on the 25th day of last May came on for trial. The facts of this case have been the 25th day of last May came on for trial. The facts of this case have been heretofore very fully stated in the press and great difficulty was found in securing a jury of men that had not formed an opinion upon the case, or of those who did not have conscientious scruples against capital punishment. The state had 26 regular jurors and called 24 more on a special venire, not quite all of whom appeared. Out of these 30 men it was impossible to secure 12 to try the case, and after spending two days and a half J. W. Melendy of Londonderry, deputy sheriff, by direction of the court, started Saturday afternoon and called in a large number of judicious men from the body of the county of his own selection for talesmen. This good old English proceeding is seldom used in our courts except for the purpose of filling a panel of jurors when for some reason there are not enough in court, and then a man is commonly taken from either the court house or the village. But, contrary to the general impression, the court has power to direct the sheriff to proceed out into the body of the county and call in any number of judicious men for this purpose. So on Monday, at the coming in of the court. Sheriff Melendy appeared with his special talesmen thus called, and a furry was secured with but little trouble with his special talesmen thus called, and a Jury was secured with but little trouble as follows:

Frank Yeaw, Samuel Yeaw, Fred Johnson and Leon T. Bogle of Dover, Amos S. Gallup of Guilford, E. M. Thurber and W. C. Phelps of Halifax, Will J. Perry and Dana S. Angler of Putney, Frank Weeden of Rockingham, Fred Wheeler of ham.

The state has occupied the time since in developing its case and will not complete its evidence for a day or two longer. The state's evidence tends to show that the respondent and Mary Grout, both of whom were married, had maintained an illegal intimacy for some time before the tragedy, and that the respondent, who evidently was not a strong-minded person, was infatuated with Mary Grout and for some time prior to the murder had been trying to have her go with him to Ashuelot, N. H., and there go to keeping Ashuelot, N. H., and there go to keeping house. That Mary, who evidently looked upon the respondent as only available when a more prepossessing lover did not appear, had promised him to sell her things in Saxtons River and go to Ashuelot. But that she kept putting off the time, and meanwhile had received attentions from one Thomas Penniman, who not only visited her but wrote her letters, some of which she showed to the respondent, and evidently fantalized him by referring to his rival. A day or two ters, some of which she showed to the respondent, and evidently tantalized him by referring to his rival. A day or two before the shooting Mary left her house in Saxtons River and went to stay with a family by the name of Tenney, where she was on Saturday, May E. and at about 7 o'clock that evening, while she was entertaining the family and some neighbors by playing a graphophone, the respondent came to the door and asked Mrs. Tenney to see Mary. As soon as Mary reached a good place to stop the music she went out and she and the respondent were heard to talk together for a few moments, the last part of the conversation being somewhat loud and excited on the part of the respondent. Next a shot was heard and Mary was heard to say, "Oh, my God!" and fall. Mrs. Tenney and the visiting neighbors immediately ran out of the back door and as they were going out a secon, shot was heard and soon after a third, and as they and others approached the front of the house the respondent was found lying in front of the doorsteps with two builtet wounds in his left breast, unconscious, and Mary Grout was lying in the front hall with her head on the lower chamber stairs, dead, with a builtet in the heart.

third shot was not fired for some sec onds afterward. The defense made the best use of this testimony as indicating that possibly it was the third shot that killed Mrs. Grout, which, if it were proven, might have an important effect upon the verdict with respect to the detree of suits.

upon the verdict with respect to the de-gree of guilt.

Deputy Sheriff George P. Alexander of Saxtons River, the officer who arrested Fairbanks, testified and Fairbanks di-rected him to a place where he had hid-den a satchel in which were some white stockings and shoes and that he told the officer he wanted Mrs. Grout laid out in them.

On Wednesday the state put on Police-

On Wednesday the state put on Police On Wednesday the state put on Police-men Houghton and Davis of Saxtons River, who testified that after having moved Fairbanks and the body of Mrs. Grout into the house they heard Fair-banks tell Deputy Speriff Alexander that he shot Mrs. Grout because she had wronged him, but was sorry, also sor-ry that he did not finish the job of kill-ing himself.

Dr. F. L. Osgood of Saxtóns River teatifies that he was with Fairbanks until about 10:30 o'clock that night and that during all that time Fairbanks was unconscious by reason of his wounds and therefore not able to make any state. therefore not able to make any state-conscious by reason of his wounds and therefore not able to make any statement.

The last witness of the day was Mrs. Leons Lawrence of Saxtons River. Both Mrs. Lawrence and Mrs. Grout had left their husbands and were keeping house together in Saxtons River up to a short time before the shooting. She testified to having read a letter written by Thomas Penniman, now a town pauper in Rockingham, to Mrs. Grout. When asked if she remembered the contents of the letter the defense objected on the ground that the letter itself was best evidence. Court stated that he would withold his railing until the next morning and the matter has not since been referred to. Mrs. Lawrence was cross examined by Judge Gibson yesterday morning, particularly with respect to the white shoes and stockings. Mrs. Lawrence testified that she herself had some white shoes and stockings that Mary Grout ofen armired them, and expressed a wish in the presence of Fairbanks that she might have some of her own. She said that Fairbanks had been accustomed to buying Mary Grout articles which he knew she wanted.

The most damaging testimony yester-

she wanted.

The most damaging testimony yesterday was that of Mrs. Myra E. Tuttle of Grafton, who has known Fairbanks many years. She testified that on the day of the tragedy she went to Bellows Fails, where she saw Fairbanks and asked him why he did not return to Grafton to live with his wife. The conversation drifted to Mary Grout, ane Mrs. Tuttle made the statement that Mary Grout was thinking of returning to Grafton to live. Fairbanks then stated according to Mrs. Tuttle. "Mary Grout will not go back to Grafton alive." Mrs. Tuttle said she went from Bellows Falls to Saxtons Rilver that day on a street car and that which went from Bellows Falls to Saxtons River that day on a street cat and that which left Bellows Falls at 12.15 p.m. and that Fairbanks went over on the same car. As bearing upon the credibility of the witness the stale put on the street railroad men, who corroborated Mrs. Tuttle's testimony as to the time she and cairbanks left Bellows Falls on the car.

bringing out the appearance of Fairbanks at his meeting with Mrs. Tuttle. Mrs. Tuttle said the respondent was usually free to talk, but on this ossacion she had hard work to draw him into conversation, and that he acted differently than he ever had done before in her presence.

C. S. Frost of Sextens River, who own-state will finish pulling its case today. Twenty witnesses have testified for the state thu far. The defense has about 40 witnesses in attendance

The most important witness this fore-noon was Charles Tenney, who testified that early in the morning after the shooting he heard Fairbanks say to his brother, almost Fairbanks, that he had done wrong and that if he lived they probably would harr him.

This case is one that is exciting afeat This case is one that is exciting afeat interest. The state is represented by State's Autorney Eucon and Autorney-General Fitts while the defense is conducted by E. W. Gibson, assigned as the respondent's counsel by the court, assisted by A. P. Carpenter and A. E. Cudworth. It is expected that a large number of witnesses will be called in defense and among other things that the question of the respondent's sanity will be fully inquired into. The respondthe question of the respondent's sanity will be fully inquired into. The respondent is taken to and from court by Deputy Sheriff George P. Alexander of Saxtons River, and the jury are in charge of Deputy Sheriff J. W. Melendy of London-derry, and are comfortably quartered at the Windham County hatel.

the Windham County hotel.
One of the gruesome incidents of the trial occurred during Wednesday afternoon when Dr. B. H. Stone of Burlington, state pathologist, from the state laboratory appeared and testified, and produced Mary Grout's heart as well as a section of the chest, which had been preserved in its natural condition, and showing the course of the bullet through it together with the bullet itself which caused her with the bullet itself which caused her Considerable interest is taken in the appearance of the respondent himself. He is evidently a man about 50 fears of age, of light complexion and rather slight build. He is under medium height and shows the effects of the wounds he received the night of the tragedy. He walks with a decided limp and apparent weakness. Whether this is apparent or real is somewhat of a mooted question, During the trial he wears an expressionless face and much of the time sits with his eyes closed. To a casual observer it would appear as though he took but little interest in what was going on, but if one watches him closely it can be seen that whenever anything occurs that is of interest or importance, his eyes will open and he is paying strict attention. While Considerable interest is taken in the and he is paying strict attention. While it is evident that he is not strong, the general impression seems to be that he is making the most of his weakness for whatever effect it may have upon the

FURS OF BEAUTY,

STYLE & QUALITY

Such Furs Are Always Satisfactory

These attributes are what you expect when you buy furs. Your own opinion of what is beautiful in appearance, appropiate in color and design, and possible to your means, of course, usually govern your selection where the assortment, like ours, is large and varied and the styles are recognized as being the newest and most suitable shown. As to quality, you rely to a large extent upon the house. By quality we mean in the first instance the careful selection of prime skins, their proper dressing and handling, the assorting and choosing of suitable skins for articles of certain shapes, their careful matching and the artistic work of experienced furriers, and finally the selection of suitable trimmings and linings which go to make up the perfection of detail. These are essential points which are fully appreciated by discriminating purchasers.

The wonderful and universal demand for neckwear and muffs has caused us to make unusual preparations to offer an extensive and varied stock. Skins worked so as to preserve their natural shape and appearance
